

BOOMING OF CHINESE GUNS HERALDED AS DEFINITE SIGN OF PEACE MOVEMENT FAILURE; PARLEYS FOR PEACE COLLAPSE

Chinese Army Leaders Refuse to Attend Peace Conference—Declare Japanese Conditions "Preposterous"—Look for Japanese Drive

SHANGHAI, Feb. 18. 3:48 P. M.—(INS)—Virtually shattering all hopes of peace within the next few hours, Chinese trench mortars began shelling the Japanese lines from positions along Mungwoo Road at 3:15 p. m. today.

Japanese guns did not reply immediately, but were expected to at any moment.

The booming of the Chinese guns was heralded as a definite sign of failure of peace negotiations reported under way all day long between Japanese army and naval officials and officers of the Chinese military forces.

Declaring the Japanese conditions to be "preposterous," Chinese army leaders refused to attend a peace conference in the French concession scheduled for 4:30 this afternoon.

An hour before the Chinese troops had resumed their bombardment of the Japanese positions in the Chapel district.

The peace parleys having collapsed, the Chinese were informed that an ultimatum, in the form of a "last warning" will be delivered to them tonight. This ultimatum will again demand that Chinese forces evacuate the Woosung fort area as well as Chapel and withdraw 20 kilometers (about 12 1/2 miles) from Shanghai.

The Chinese trench mortars were located near the railway between the Markham Road and North Stations, close to the boundary of the International Settlement.

A brisk rifle fire from the same sector had preceded the firing of the big Chinese guns.

C. T. Wang, former Chinese minister of foreign affairs and now a member of the central government's foreign affairs committee, told International News Service he expected the Japanese to recommence their attacks, possibly the long-planned big drive, either tonight or tomorrow.

The Japanese minister to China, Mamoru Shigemitsu, announced at noon that he had delivered a second verbal ultimatum to General Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the Chinese 19th route army, demanding withdrawal of his forces beyond artillery range of the International Settlement.

If the Chinese agree to the demand, Shigemitsu said, the Japanese would draw their lines back slightly, probably from Chapel and Woosung. The Japanese minister did not state if there had been a time limit attached to the ultimatum.

The funeral of E. T. Francis and H. G. Prior, British seamen killed yesterday by an exploding Chinese shell as they were guarding British property along the Hongkong wharf of the International Settlement, will be held Saturday.

A procession representing all the forces of Shanghai will march from the hospital, in which they died of shrapnel wounds, to a cathedral, where a special service is to be held. The two sailors will be buried later in the Hunjiao Cemetery, outside the defense lines.

A FLEET ONE IS ADDED TO THE FLEET

(By "The Stroller")

Another boat has been added to the fleet on Bristol waters. The addition is a sail-boat, some twelve feet long, built by Whiteley McBride, son of Mrs. Florence McBride, 336 Taft street, and some of his pals.

It works "pretty fine" according to Whiteley who is 15 years old, except that it leaks some. But this condition will soon be remedied when the boys finish their "doping" of the craft. It has been painted yellow, and the stern and bow well "rimmed." The sail is made of muslin which has been painted for durability. The lads have had it in the water already, and report it rides comfortably.

WAR ZONE BULLETINS

Tokyo, Feb. 18.—Japan is presenting a written ultimatum to Chinese military commanders at Shanghai demanding complete withdrawal of their troops to a line 20 kilometers (12 1/2 miles) distant from Shanghai. The Foreign Office made this announcement tonight and added the Chinese will be given 24 hours to accomplish the withdrawal.

Although the newspapers report Lt. General Uyeda, commanding land operations at Shanghai, had delivered the ultimatum, the foreign office professed to be without official information on the subject tonight.

GERMANY ADVOCATES ARMS REDUCTIONS

Proposes Abolition of All Military Aircraft and Destruction of Existing Air Armaments

ALSO ATTACK TREATY

By Arno Bosch-Fleuret

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

GENEVA, Feb. 18.—(INS)—Rejecting the draft convention of the disarmament commission because of "omissions and defects," Germany today presented its proposals to the disarmament conference, advocating widespread reductions of arms of all types.

A striking feature of the German plan was the demand for a total abolition of all military aircraft and the destruction of all existing air armaments.

Rudolf Nadelin handed a memorandum containing the German proposals to officials of the conference shortly before it convened. The German delegate was the first to speak.

The German views were a bitter attack of the Versailles Treaty and its provisions specifically limiting Germany's army, while allowing larger forces to be maintained by other powers, and of the draft convention of the disarmament commission.

An introductory remark attached to the proposals memorandum stated the German plan is based on the principle that there is but one principle of disarmament equally applicable to all nations, and that Germany is unable to accept any convention not equally applicable to Germany as well as other nations.

Passing motorists hurried the victims to the Trenton hospitals. Highway Patrolman Hohlfelder, of the Langhorne Highway Patrol, investigated.

Trips to Nearby Washington Landmarks

By Edward W. Hocker

Because of the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington, keen interest has been aroused in all manner of Washington landmarks. Southeastern Pennsylvania is fortunate in possessing so many of these landmarks, associated with the career of Washington in war and peace. Herewith is one of a series of twenty articles describing nearby places which are linked with the story of the Father of his country.

X.—The Pottsgrove Headquarters

Leaving northern Chester County, the American army crossed the Schuylkill at Parker's Ford, September 19, 1777, entering what is now the upper part of Montgomery County, but was then Philadelphia County. The Americans had extensive military stores at Reading, and to be in a position to protect these the army went into camp northeast of the present borough of Pottstown on September 22. This region being then included in Pottsgrove Township, the camp is usually termed the camp at Pottsgrove, though the troops were spread out in New Hanover and Frederick townships as well.

The British crossed the Schuylkill at Valley Forge, September 22 and 23, and on the 25th they advanced into Germantown, taking possession of Philadelphia the following day. Two houses still standing are rival claimants for the distinction of having been Washington's headquarters at the time of the Pottsgrove camp, September 22 to 26, 1777.

One of these, and the one most frequently mentioned, is the Mill Park Hotel of later times, in the northern part of Pottstown, which at the time of the camp was the home of Colonel Thomas Potts, a militia officer.

But according to local traditions in the Frederick region, the commander-in-chief was quartered in the house of Colonel Frederick Antes, in the southern part of Upper Frederick Township, now the home of Frederick Wigg. Colonel Antes also was a militia officer and one of the leading citizens of the region.

The fact of the matter may be that Washington stayed for a few days at each place, since he undoubtedly was acquainted with both Colonel Potts and Colonel Antes. But none of the orders or letters written from the Pottsgrove camp mentions the house where Washington dwelt.

WATCHMAN MURDERED AT LANSDALE PLANT

Lansdale, Feb. 18.—Battered about the head and face with hands and feet tightly bound, the body of Samuel Forti, 45-year-old watchman of the Werner Foundry Company, today was found hanging in a locker-room at the foundry.

Police believe the watchman was strangled by his slayer and then suspended by a rope. After hanging its victim, Lansdale police believe the slayer frantically battered him about the face and head as he was slowly strangled to death.

Both eyes were discolored, indicating he had been beaten. His hands were tied behind his back.

Forti was married. He is survived by his widow and ten children.

Neither relatives nor officials at the foundry could advance any reason for his slaying. He had no known enemies, it was said.

A suicide theory was first advanced, but police declared the condition of the body clearly indicated murder.

Forti had been dead several hours, it was believed, when the body was found shortly after 7 a. m. The discovery was made by Harry Long, foreman of the foundry.

Montgomery County Coroner Ronald H. Detre, Norristown, was notified. He will assume charge of the investigation immediately, in co-operation with Lansdale chief of police.

CHAS. A. PARSONS ON SCHOOL BOARD IN FALLS TOWNSHIP

Named by Judge Keller to Fill Vacancy Due to Kellett Resignation

PETITION IS FILED

Bedminster Supervisors Ask for Three Mills More on Road Tax

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 18.—Judge Hiram H. Keller appointed Charles A. Parsons a member of the school board of Falls Township to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of William Kellett on January 13, this year.

Supervisors of Bedminster Township filed a petition in Quarter Sessions Court asking for a special allowance of three mills tax for road purposes in 1932. The petition was filed by the Township solicitor, Webster S. Achey.

In 1931 the tax rate for road purposes was ten mills with an additional five-mill tax permitted by a decree of the Court of Quarter Sessions entered on March 23, 1931, making the total tax 15 mills.

The assessed valuation of all real estate in 1931 was $1,115,084 in Bedminster Township and the occupation assessments for the district in 1931 amounted to $160,900 making a total taxable amount of $1,275,984.

In the petition filed it is stated that the net amount of road tax collected in 1931 and received by the Board of Supervisors was $17,733.70 and that a recent survey was made by the Supervisors in connection with the engineers of the State Highway Department, in which it was found there are sixty-five miles of dirt roads in Bedminster Township which the supervisors are responsible for upkeep and maintenance.

The outstanding indebtedness of the Township on December 1, 1931, was $31,114.87 and there is an additional $2,000. During 1931 the supervisors paid off $3,000 on the Township debt. The petitioners say they will pay off at least $3,000 more during 1932 with the additional three mill tax, which will make a total of 18 mills. The petition is signed by Walter S. Lewis, president; Mahlon Rice, treasurer; and Abraham Gahman, secretary.

Other miscellaneous business was transacted in Court.

Announcement was made of the continuance of the trial of the three Hilltown Township school directors charged with malfeasance in office, due to the illness of counsel for the directors, Mark Thatcher, of Perkasie. The cases had been scheduled for trial before Judge Samuel E. Shull on February 29.

In the Common Pleas Court a petition and order for a rule to pay the amount of an award and proper costs in Court in the case of James O. Hazard against Metropolitan Edison Company, was filed. Another petition was filed in Common Pleas for the satisfaction of a lost mortgage in the case of William W. Davis against Raymond A. Carney.

Mayor Stockham Gets Control of Police Officers

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 18.—Control and supervision of the Police Department, which has rested with the Borough Council police committee for the past six years, was turned over to Mayor Thomas Stockham at a meeting of the Morrisville rulers Tuesday night. Action was taken following an opinion rendered by the borough solicitor.

Stockham told the police committee members, however, that he would be glad to have its continued advice and cooperation.

The council approved a resolution for the purchase of a Seagrave hook and ladder truck for the Union Fire Company at a cost of $6,300. Previous to the vote, J. Lawrence Grim, a borough attorney, warned Council that to take such action would be illegal under the terms of the specifications on which bids were submitted. Borough Solicitor Lewis R. Bond ruled otherwise, however.

Harper Stockham, son of Mayor Stockham, presented to Council a gavel and block which he made from a beam removed from the historic building, "Summerseat," here.

Assurance was given Raymond Richie, an officer of the Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association, that steps would be taken to relieve the road conditions in Chedester Manor which he complained of. Council decided to employ a dog catcher and adopted the following scale of municipal wages: Borough laborers, 40 cents an hour; foremen, 50 cents; steamroller operator, 75 cents. Tree plantings on Hillcrest, Osborne, Stockham, Central and Park avenues were recommended by the Shade Tree Commission. Ordinances were introduced changing the name of the Lower Ferry Road to the Old Post Road. There is another Ferry Road in the northern end of the borough.

A TAX ON COLONELS

In the past being a Kentucky colonel has been all honor and no pay. If a bill now before the Kentucky legislature becomes law, the title will carry with it a pay provision but it will be a tax, not a salary.

It is proposed to levy an annual tax of $100 on all who continue to use the honorary title of colonel after their commissions have expired. That it is a revenue-raiser, rather than a restrictive measure, is apparent from the fact that the last two governors alone appointed a thousand colonels, and once a Kentucky colonel always a Kentucky colonel.

Playing colonel seems to be a major industry in the blue grass country. Since a man who is once a Kentucky colonel continues the title without much regard for the actual term of his appointment, there must be thousands of these "patriotic, courageous, loyal and fearless colonels," as they are described in the resolution before their legislature.

Were it possible to collect $100 annually from her army of colonels, Kentucky would have solved her state revenue problem, especially if the title and tax entitled said colonel to his historic quota of mint juleps.

THE HIT-AND-RUN MENACE

It is hardly necessary to say that every effort should be made to apprehend motorists who flee from the scene of an accident leaving a victim helpless in the road. Such a person offends all sense of decency and every dictate of civilization.

One appreciates that for a moment a motorist might be panic-stricken when he realizes he has struck down a fellow-being. But he who yields to fear and flees the scene convicts himself of cowardice. But he, who, actuated only by cunning, leaves a human being in distress, is worse than a coward.

An appeal to manhood where there is no manhood is futile. So long as there is a possibility of escaping the consequences of carelessness there will be those who will attempt it.

The only effective check against the hit-and-run driver is increased efficiency of the police in ferreting out such offenders and a severity of the courts that will make an attempted escape a greater hazard than stopping after an accident to render assistance to the injured and face the consequences. For people who are actuated by fear make the consequences of abandoning a victim a cause for greater fear. Make it clear to the cunning that their greater advantage lies in admitting responsibility for the accident if the fault is theirs.

And the public can help abolish the hit-and-run driver by letting the motorist know that should he stop his machine he will not become the victim of mob violence.

You can guess at a man's opinions if you know how many days he wears a shirt.

Since the president's manifesto against hoarding it will mean political death for the candidate found with a dime lost in the lining of his coat.

"The GAY BANDIT of the BORDER"

by TOM GILL

SYNOPSIS

Under the leadership of "El Coyote," the masked bandit, the Mexican ranchers plan to overthrow the wealthy Paco Morales, who has confiscated their property for years. All search for "El Coyote" has been in vain. Ted Radcliffe, a young American whose father Morales ruined, loves the Spaniard's beautiful niece, Adela. Jito, Morales' ward, is jealous. Bob Harkness, a friend of Ted's late father, urges Ted not to quarrel with Morales, as he has other plans. Following a raid on the village by Jito's vaqueros, one of his men is killed by Anton, an Indian. Morales, fearing the vengeance of the tribe, releases Anton. Out riding, Adela tells Ted she disapproves of her uncle's treatment of the peons. Ted considers Adela's wealth a barrier between them, but she tells him to let nothing interfere when he falls in love. Ted is forced to shoot his horse after a fall. He and Adela get lost and spend the night in the desert. Next morning, Adela tells Ted the bond between them must hold, come what may. They meet Anton, who lends Ted his horse. Morales is furious. Adela resents his insinuations, and to spite her uncle, she kisses Ted and rushes from the room. Morales retains a courteous attitude toward Ted, but the latter knows that underneath hate is seething. Bob and Ted visit Major Blount of the U. S. Cavalry to ascertain if he has news of "El Coyote."

CHAPTER XXX

Then, each busy with his own thoughts, they fell silent for an hour, while the car wound its way toward the broken country of the low foothills. At last Bob pointed. "There's Blount's camp, hidden away as carefully as the Washington Monument. Tell me, what self-respecting bandit could ever miss that? Let's see what the major knows."

But the major, it turned out knew surprisingly little. A week's constant patrol of the desert had yielded nothing, and so far the cavalrymen who were stationed at the few water-holes had learned nothing. Two sergeants alone had anything to report, and their report was far from satisfactory to Blount. They had camped at a small waterhole, and in the night a lone rider had ridden up and stolen both their horses from under their very noses. Next day the stolen horses were found tied to the corral in Blount's camp. The major was very bitter about it all. Soldiers, he seemed to feel, ought not to be treated that way. It wasn't good, orthodox warfare. "Damn it, impudent bravado!" he stormed, looking very fierce and military in his khaki. Then his face brightened.

"But we're combing this God-forsaken country from the U. S. border to the high range. That means we will soon be even, as far as knowledge of the country goes. We're mapping every stream and water-hole—he'll have to step high, wide and handsome to keep ahead of us. And we're showing the natives that it isn't the great thing to be one of El Coyote's friends. They're still slow in giving information. It's been a case of 'no sabe' ever since we started. They know—of course they know. But they're loyal, and they're terribly afraid of the death that overtook the last poor devil who gave information on El Coyote."

"But there's one chap I've got my eye on. I think he could tell a lot if he dared. He is one of Morales' men, but I suspect he is or was part of El Coyote's band. Two nights ago he came to my tent and wanted to know if I would send him with a guard out of the country if he gave us information about the bandit. I told him if he gave the right kind of information we would give him a guard to any place he wanted to go, and I guaranteed protection against revenge. My Spanish isn't too good, as you know, and we didn't get together. He wasn't quite satisfied, and he went away, but he's coming back."

"The major waved his hand. 'Sooner or later that's the way it's going to go. It may not be this fellow, and may not be now. But next day or next month a man will come willing to talk if there's gold and protection for him. Morales will put up the gold and I'll furnish the protection, and then—zip!—the end of El Coyote, and you'll owe me a dinner. In the meantime, it's good practice for the boys and, as Clara says, it reduces my figure to where I can button up last year's vest."

Don Bob looked thoughtful. "It sounds like a drawn-out process. It may take years—unless you learn something in your interview with this fellow."

"If he comes back you will be able to help. I'd like to have you here—you and Morales. That may be next week. You and Morales, with your knowledge of the country, can judge what the information may be worth. Personally, I think the fellow's holding out for a raise in the blood money."

"He's very wise. I should hold out for a great deal. He had better get enough gold to take him out of the country and keep him in a state of pleasant drunkenness for his natural life; otherwise he is risking too much for too little."

"You and Price will always believe the arm of El Coyote is all-powerful."

"My friend, I think El Coyote, if he wanted to, could kill you, or Morales, or Ted here, within the week, and get away with it."

"Then why the devil doesn't he?"

"Because it wouldn't serve his ends. It would only be a nasty killing. Suppose he killed Jito and Morales too. That wouldn't end the system that's been built up. Sooner or later someone would take their place. The Coyote isn't playing for that. He's playing for the whole blessed country to be with him when he moves. And once the country is with him there will be some new history written on the border. As for you, major mio, I absolutely believe that there isn't a move you make he doesn't know, and I don't think all these healthy soldier boys of yours will get him yet. So don't tell me too much about your plans, for I've still a sneaking sympathy for the way he plays whatever cards destiny gives him. He's fighting against the forces of two nations. But I'll be glad to come over to your conference any time, if only to watch old Morales."

Cautiously the major looked about him, and from his face both Ted and Bob knew some secret was about to be delivered.

"This is not to go any farther," warned the little major, and again he looked about him and lowered his voice. "El Coyote may turn out to be a woman!"

Don Bob threw back his head in that silent laugh of his. "A Boadicea of the border, eh?"

The idea seemed to delight him. "Won't you catch hell in Washington if it is a woman! If you hunt her down you'll be a brute, and if she escapes you they'll say you've been made a fool of by a weak, defenseless female. If I were you I'd resign. But whoever told you that rot!"

"I can't tell you. I only say it may turn out that way. You know yourself no one has actually seen the bandit."

"I have a suspicion that Lopez, the traitor, saw him that night along the Verdi trail. Men say his eyes were frozen with fear and not pleasant to look at." Bob shook his head. "No, major, I shouldn't lay any trap for a lady bandit. I think when you find your quarry it will be a man. Probably about the size of Ted here."

"If he is that size, it must be Jito. No one else on the border carries all that beef."

Again Bob smiled. "Well, it might not be a bad idea to look into Jito's activities, although I strongly doubt if it will teach you much."

They left soon after, and in the car as they sped toward Verdi, Bob was in high spirits. The idea of the major's "lady bandit," as he called her, delighted him.

"I've half a mind to spread the rumor in Verdi that it's the major's wife, adopting this role to give her husband exercise. But why should the man even for a moment suspect such nonsense? It must be the military mind at work."

Outside the gate at Bob's hacienda they stopped, and Ted stepped out to lay down the bars.

As Bob drew up before the house a servant ran forward.

"Señor," he shouted in Spanish, "while still afar, 'you have heard!'"

"Heard what?"

"Last night El Coyote came to the upper camp and stole twenty steers. Twenty of the señor's best cattle, that son of a devil."

For a time Don Bob looked at Ted, then at last his lips curved in a little smile. "Now doesn't that beat hell?" he pondered, reaching for a cigarette. "And after all the nice things I've said about him, too."

Within an hour Don Bob had left for the north ranch, sending Ted to Verdi for any news that might have reached there; and it was not until late the following afternoon that Bob returned.

Ted, just back from a round of the near-by camps, had already begun dinner when he heard the jingle of spurs on the porch outside. A moment later the rancher joined him.

"Too tired to eat," Bob sank into the nearest chair. "But give me a dozen cups of coffee. What did you learn?"

Ted shook his head. "Nothing. Neither in Verdi nor in the camps. And you?"

"I've ridden all over that upper country for signs. Finally I lost trace of the steers among the sandhills. It's blowing hard up there, like blasts from a furnace. It would wipe out the tracks of a dinosaur. Lord, that coffee's welcome!"

"Bob, do you think El Coyote did this?"

The rancher smiled. "I don't. My boys can't tell me much. They only know that half a dozen Mexican horsemen rode down on the herd, cut out twenty of the best steers and drove them south toward the line. Only two of the boys saw it happen, and they very prudently waited in the brush until the job was done. Then they galloped back with the news. But the big white horse that El Coyote rides wasn't seen. My boys are sure of that."

He drank two cups of black coffee, then, lost in thought, chewed absently on the end of a cigar. He seemed to reach some decision, for abruptly he rose. "I still have one or two questions about this thing, and tired or not I'm going over to Mendoza's. You'd better come along. Mendoza's is part of your education."

"I've heard that name."

"Of course you have. Mendoza's is the greatest institution for vice and unvarnished evil in Verdi—or in all the borderland, for that matter. It is the one place where at some time or other you will find anyone you are looking for. If you are patient, he or she is sure to show up at Mendoza's."

GENNETTS SPEND HONEYMOON HERE

Civil War Veteran and Bride
Are Happy And Contented

SHUN ALL PUBLICITY

Happy and contented in their home here, a Civil War veteran, 86, and his recent bride, 59, cannot see why so much interest is shown in their marriage at Elkton last week.

"I married because I wanted a home of my own," says the groom, Richard Gennett. The bride, who previous to her marriage was Mrs. Carrie Scott, just smiles and says nothing. Asked to pose for a photograph both at first declined, saying that they desired no publicity. Finally Mrs. Gennett gave in to the pleadings of the photographer and said "Whatever he says," pointing to her husband, but the sturdy veteran continued his opposition to being photographed, and in any way having his marriage exploited.

At last both agreed and posed in the living-room of their home, 321 Taft street. The couple was driven to Elkton Wednesday by the son of the bride by a former marriage. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gennett had wed before.

Gennett is the father of seven children, three of whom are dead. Mrs. Gennett is the mother of nine children, all of whom are living.

Mr. Gennett says he is the only survivor of the 115th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers. He left Philadelphia with Company K in 1862, and was wounded twice. He was wounded at Gettysburg in 1863, being shot in the right leg; and his second wound was in the left ankle. He participated in 11 engagements. He is a member of the Shinn Post, G. A. R., Burlington, N. J. His first wife died in December of last year, after the couple had celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary October 6th, last year, at their home on the Burlington Pike, near Bridgeboro.

Gennett is the great-grandson of "Notorious Citizen, Richard Gennett," who came here in 1792 as minister, to this country from France, and who later married Katherine Clinton, daughter of Governor Clinton, of New York.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN AND BRIDE

Gennett's hobby is fishing and painting pictures in oil. He also takes much delight in making small boats as toys for children. He is a ship carpenter by trade, and retired several years ago when his ankle which has never completely recovered from the bullet wound, made it difficult for him to stand for any long period of time.

Gennett is intensely patriotic and says "If a man doesn't honor his country, he doesn't honor God, and a man who won't fight for his flag, shouldn't have a flag to fight for."

Doylestown to Install Modern Street Lights

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 18.—Main street from Ashland to Broad street which now has 15 lights, will have 11 additional, or 26 street lights in all if plans adopted by Borough Council, Monday evening, can be agreed upon by the Philadelphia Electric Company.

Two representatives of the electric company, W. G. Sterritt and J. S. Adams, suggested to Council that the adoption and installation of better and more modern lights would save the borough considerable money besides making it one of the most attractive lighted places on the Lackawanna Trail.

According to Mr. Sterritt and Councilman Bartram H. Moore, five extra lights will be placed on State street and four more on Court street, which will round out a plan to light up the business centers of the town. The fixtures will be long-arm gooseneck brackets and each will contain a 600-candle-power lamp. A motion to accept the offer was made by Joseph A. Steelman, and seconded by Bartram H. Moore. President A. Harry Clayton appointed Solicitor Wesley Bunting to enter into an agreement with the Philadelphia Electric Company with regard to definite plans for the installation of better street illumination in Doylestown.

One Hundred and Forty-One One-Room Schools in County

The one-room school continues to attract the attention of school officials who are responsible for the progress of education in rural districts.

The number of such schools in Pennsylvania still exceeds 6800, according to James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Reports compiled in his office show how they are distributed throughout the Commonwealth, and also, the number of schools closed during the past year. There were 141 one-room schools in operation in Bucks County during 1931 and six such schools were discontinued during the year.

Chesterfield

They Satisfy

THEY WERE TALKING ABOUT SMOKING . . . whether girls should or should not smoke; but it came out that all three of them had been smoking for a long time.

They were asking each other what made a good cigarette. And after discussing one thing and another, they agreed that a cigarette should be milder.

They thought also that it should taste just right—that is, not over-sweet, but on the other hand, not bitter—just sweet enough.

And everybody, they said, wants anything that is placed in the mouth just as pure as can be.

Then they began to think what cigarette, if any, filled this bill; and agreed that CHESTERFIELD was milder—tasted better—and was pure. The girls were satisfied, because "They Satisfy."

SHORTER SKIRTS TO BE SEEN IN SPRING FOR EVENING DRESS

Gowns for Very Formal Late Evening Affairs To Remain Long

By Alice Langelier
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS.—Even evening dresses will be shorter when the robins sing again in the springtime. They're appearing at all the smart sartorial establishments around the Rue de la Paix and Champs Elysees.

This means dresses that end at the ankles or several inches above, a satisfactory length for dining early in the restaurant and then for the theatre afterward. Formal evening gowns for later affairs will undoubtedly remain long.

New Nubby Silk

This charming Spring frock, worn by Frances Dee, screen notable, is composed of the newest material—nubby silk. It is of bright blue and beige, simply but exquisitely tailored. The frock is suitable for either sports or street wear.

SPORTS

JINXES HUMORED MOST BY BALL PLAYERS

By James F. Greene
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(VNS)—The season of superstitions is about to begin with the encampment of major league ball players.

Of all the sports, in none are the beliefs in jinxes and charms humored to the extent that they are in baseball. Every ball player believes there are just so many hits to a bat and for that reason he has an aversion to it being used by other players. At the end of the season he will discard the bat that he has been using in the belief that it has been emptied of all its base hits.

In the old days sanitation often was sacrificed for Lady Luck. The players never washed their uniforms when in a winning streak. At the turn of the century a team with a streak of luck wore uniforms of ink blue.

When Bob Shawkey hurried for the New York Yankees he would never take his place on the mound without first donning a faded and tattered red sweat shirt. He believed implicitly in its good luck charms.

Eddie Collins chewed gum in the belief that it helped his playing. Between innings he plastered the wad of gum on the flat button atop his baseball cap.

"Rabbit" Maranville used a fielder's glove so old and battered that it was ready to fall apart. But he held onto it because he feared he might run into a jinx.

Eddie Brannick, secretary of the Giants, is one of the most superstitious of present day baseballers. He never shaves when his team is in a world series. In 1924 when the Giants encountered Washington he did not remove his hirsute adornment for eight days. One time when the Giants were trailing the Chicago Nationals in an important series Brannick hired two negroes to sit with him in his box so as to sway the tide of battle. He has never been able to figure out why it didn't work out right.

Ty Cobb, one of the greatest of all ball players, also was one of the most superstitious. He was loaded with mystic belief in the game. This Speaker ignored them all. So did Honus Wagner.

Charley Barrett, scout for the Cardinals, has a cravat complex. If his team loses the particular necktie that he happened to be wearing is cast out of his wardrobe forever.

Other than the practice of stepping on second base when going to the dug-out after each inning, Babe Ruth is not by nature superstitious. Barleigh Grimes never shaves the day before he is to pitch. Joe Dugan, former Yankee never returned the ball around the infield. Dazzy Vance always flaunts a tattered sleeve when he is pitching.

There are other ball players, who have their mystic beliefs, but keep them to themselves. They carry rabbit feet and other good luck tokens that can be kept from prying eyes.

One of the most common superstitions most rigidly adhered to is the scattering of bats high in the air in front of the dugout as an aid to rally. Another compels bench warmers of a team that is in the field to keep bats in front of the dugout from being crossed lest the pitcher lose his effectiveness.

CLASSIFIED ADS begin many a story of success.

INCREASED ADVERTISING CAN BRING BOOM IN 1932

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The board of directors of the Advertising Federation of America has announced that its national survey indicates the 1932 advertising dollar will bring better results than at any time during the past two years.

Gilbert T. Hodges, president of the organization, said the survey showed a growing confidence in 1932 merchandising possibilities.

His report added that greatly improved credit conditions and the beginning of commodity price recovery have been reflected in an "improved general morale."

"Check-up of 102 large companies showed that those firms which increased their advertising in 1930 over 1929 made a 58 per cent better profit comparison than those which decreased it," the report stated. "Those same firms increased their lead still further in 1931."

Mr. Hodges pointed out that a recent analysis of 50 large cities revealed appreciable business recovery had been under way for some months in cities where newspaper advertising has been the heaviest.

Bristol Young People Are Enrolled at Training School

Several members of Bristol Baptist Young People's Union are enrolled for the leadership training school to be held in Holmesburg. This school is under the auspices of the Northeast District, B. Y. P. U., Philadelphia and vicinity.

The purpose of this school is to prepare the young people for work in the local society as well as the church. At the school one can learn how to better handle a Sunday School class, to get the best results from the pupils, it isn't the object of the school that the students just obtain the knowledge; they also learn how to put it to work that someone else can also benefit. There are five courses at the school and each course has a competent teacher.

The courses and teachers are as follows: Course No. 1—"The New Testament," teacher, Dr. J. B. Champion, professor at Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary; Course No. 536—"The Pioneer Plan," teacher, Miss Ruth S. Logan, from Moore Street Mission, Philadelphia; Course No. 736—"The Commission Plan," teacher, Miss Fay Schirmer, a teacher in the Lansdale public school; Course No. 169—"Home Ideals," teacher, Mrs. Mary Chalmers, director of Parent Education, the Baptist Publication Society; Course No. 261—"Store Telling," teacher, Mrs. Frederick W. Tomlinson, supervisor of Children's work, First Baptist Church, Philadelphia.

Home Ideals is a new course to the young people. Subjects to be discussed are as follows: the family in history, Bible homes, the effect of Jesus' teaching on home ideals, present difficulties in family living, choosing a mate, marriage and home adjustments.

Each course has been carefully selected in order that the young people might learn something that will be of use to them.

The term of the school is two weeks, opening February 16th, for enrollment and first classes. The other dates are Feb. 18, 23, 25 and 27.

On Saturday, February 27th, when the school closes, those enrolled will be entertained by Mr. Herbert Watson, fellowship commissioner of the Northeast District, at a social which will be held in the Holmesburg Baptist Church which is also the home of the school.

The local B. Y. P. U. meets every Sunday night at seven p. m. in the Sunday School room of the First Baptist Church, Cedar and Walnut streets.

Next Monday night the young people will hold their business meeting for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year. Every member is requested to attend.

Quiet Day at Newtown Proves Profitable

Dorlington, St. James's, Bristol, and St. Luke's, Newtown. Also in attendance were the following rectors: Rev. Francis Barnett, Yardley; Rev. Seaver Holden, Morrisville; Rev. Waldo Parker, Langhorne, and Rev. Amos Goddard, Newtown.

The day began with the celebration of Holy Communion at 10.30, the bishop being the celebrant, Rev. Waldo Parker, the epistoler, and the Rev. Amos Goddard, rector of St. Luke's, the gospeller; and was followed by a series of four meditations based upon the text, St. John 3:16. "So God loved the world that He gave His only begotten son to the end that all who believe on Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

The first meditation consisted in an exposition of a portion of the text, "So God loved the world that He gave His only begotten son." The topic dealt upon by the bishop was the atonement, of how salvation was obtained by the way of the cross. He brought out two salient facts: What God did and how He did it. "The source of salvation is in God. The initial point of our salvation comes from God, who is a God of love. The crucifixion showed that love. We must, therefore, not fear God but love Him. We must not resist evil only, but hate it."

The second meditation centered around the words, "To the end that all that believe in Him." The subject was faith. The bishop defined it as the leaping in the direction you are going and not leaping blindly in the dark. "Faith is not acceptance, but trust. We must have faith based upon experience as we can only know God through our experience of His operations in the world outside us. In His life as exhibited in Jesus Christ, and the motions towards true godliness and holiness in our own lives. Faith, therefore, is a power upon which all men depend as Voltaire said. If there were no God, men would create one. It is also a vitalizing belief in Jesus Christ and what He did and what He is, resulting in good works. "O dearly, dearly has he loved! And we must love him too. And trust in his redeeming blood. And try his works to do."

The third meditation was an elucidation of the words, "Should not perish." The theme was saving faith. "Faith saves by creating in us new, higher, and nobler motives of life because saving faith in Christ is faith in a person. To perish is not necessarily confined to physical torture and torments but to that mental and spiritual anguish that comes from being separated from the good as in Jesus Christ who died to make us good."

The fourth meditation was an interpretation of the words, "But have everlasting life," the fruit of faith. "Faith brings everlasting life, and we can have that life here and now. It depends upon our own efforts. This the bishop brought out in the difference between the two Greek words for crown, one diadem, not dependent either upon effort or character, and the other, stephanos, dependent upon effort. With faith there is a true combination of holiness and happiness."

The Bishop brought the meditations to a conclusion by remarking that if he were asked to name the best book, he would say the Bible; and if he were questioned what part of the Bible was the best, he would answer, the New Testament; and should he be asked what part of the New Testament was the best, he would reply, the words of Jesus; and if he were asked to give the best text, he would unhesitatingly quote, "So God loved the world that He gave His only begotten son to the end that all who believe in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

The meditations were spiritually uplifting and those attending were profitably rewarded.

Gibbons Followed Trouble Everywhere

nand's realm was beset by danger. Later he was present in Spain in the earlier unsuccessful attempts of the Republicans to force Alfonso to abdicate.

Then he undertook an American expedition, leading his own caravan straight across the Sahara Desert, from Algiers to Colomb-Béchar thence to Timbuctoo.

From Timbuctoo he went down the Niger to the Atlantic and thence proceeded to Cape Town at the southern extremity of the dark continent. He struck off to Australia and Singapore from there, and then continued on to China.

At Shanghai news of the Riff war against the French and Spaniards reached him. He was ordered to North Africa.

Two weeks later Gibbons was in Fez, in Morocco where General De Chambrun was preparing the French offensive in liaison with General Primo Di Rivera the Madrid dictator, personally in command of the Spanish troops.

He lived in Germany for months, getting first hand information of Baron Righolien, the "Red Knight of Germany," then passed a long period in England, checking up on the victims of the supreme ace of the war.

Then he came back to America, but not for long. Within a few months he was on an airplane expedition, flying over the Caribbean, visiting all the ports and all the islands, studying from the sky the living map of the next potential theater of a naval war for the United States. He used this information in his book, "The Red Napoleon."

(Tomorrow the Courier will carry a concluding article on the life and activities of Floyd Gibbons.)

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODBODY

FEEDING YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN

I RECENTLY received a letter like this: "Won't you give us some special advice on foods for the boys and girls—or should I call them young men and women—between the ages of 16 and 25. It seems to me that this is a neglected age. Our children are too grown up to pay much attention to what we tell them, and they're still too young to realize the importance of good food."

Let's answer this letter about food for boys and girls between the ages of 16 and 25. A good many of them are still in school during these youthful years. And I have an idea that a great number of them—that is, a great number of the girls—know that they should eat, for they learn all about it in their nutrition classes. Yes, I have a pretty good idea that these college girls have read some excellent books on the subject, including those by Mary Swartz Rose, very well known as a Professor of Nutrition at Columbia University.

I admire Mrs. Rose's sane, wholesome attitude toward food, and nutrition. In one of her books there is this quotation: "A little thought, a little self-control, and then forget that there is such a thing as digestion."

But before we forget that there is such a thing as digestion we should know the fundamental principles of nutrition.

Even after the age of 16 nearly all persons continue to increase in weight, and many in height, for at least four or five years. Twenty-five years round out the growing period and then we have what Mrs. Rose calls "that fine working machine, the adult man or woman."

Now let's take three different young people, and consider their food problems. John, we'll say, starts to work when he's seventeen—or eighteen—active outdoor work. He will thrive on pork and beans, cabbage and potatoes, corn bread, milk and apple pie. "Outdoor life," quoting Mrs. Rose again,

"outdoor life and fresh air are sauce to the appetite and tonic to the digestion."

So much for John. John's cousin, Albert, goes to work in an office—let's say Albert is a young bank clerk. He sits all day in a warm, rather close room. The only exercise he gets is walking a block or so, to and from the carline. Albert couldn't possibly do good work on a heavy diet. But he needs three regular meals, and each one fairly substantial, even though his appetite is not so keen, nor his digestion so vigorous, as that of his cousin who works outdoors all day long.

Girls—youn, women—who have indoor occupations are more likely to suffer from fickle appetite than are young men, and they are tempted to make their food—pickles and candy and soda fountain dainties—not a well-balanced diet for Miss Sixteen.

If a luncheon is taken from home, a warm beverage should be added, if possible. Mrs. Rose suggests a number of inexpensive luncheons for young people—luncheons which provide the proper amount of fuel for the person who sits most of the day.

One of these lunches includes cream of tomato soup, toast, butter and rice pudding. Another—bean soup, cornbread and butter and chocolate blanc mange with thin cream. Our next problem concerns the young man and the young woman, between 18 and 23 or 24, who are completing their education. Says Mrs. Rose: "It is not always realized that these are years for storing capital physically as well as mentally . . . what we need is . . . to make every college table a training table for high physical resistance in future years."

Well, in these enlightened days, most college dining halls are supervised by expert dietitians, so Tom and Dick and their sister Harriet probably eat what is good for them—and parents needn't worry.

Sometimes it's hard to make a young man or a young woman who is buying his or her own meals realize that it's mighty poor economy to cut down on certain important foods. But it's true that prolonged underfeeding, or malnutrition, in these critical years between 18 and 21 may result in breakdowns at 35 or 40.

"Out in the Cold"

HIT BY OLD MAN
HARD LUCK

MICKEY WALKER
WHO WAS LEFT OUT IN THE COLD BY SCHEMLING BECAUSE PEOPLE SAID THE FIGHT WOULDN'T DRAW!

OH, FOR THE DAYS OF THE BIG BUCKS.

THE MAGNATES ARE GIVING THE BALL PLAYERS SOME TERRIFIC WALLOPS IN THE POCKETBOOK!

THE Good Doctor Kearns departed from New York a few weeks back in high dudgeon. In fact the Good Doctor was burning up. And there was good reason, apparently, for Madison Square Garden and Max Schmeling, champion of all the heavyweights, had just withdrawn from that proposed championship affair at Miami in which the Doctor's man Friday, Mickey Walker, was to have played the role of challenger.

Ever since the split between himself and Jack Dempsey, some years back, Old Doc Kearns has been seeking a fighter who could win back for him the glory and the shekels that go with managing a world's champion. He experimented with a host of overgrown youths, but after a few tests proved that these young men weren't going anywhere in particular the Doctor began the build-up of his great fighter, Walker, whom he had cleverly maneuvered into the middle-weight title. Mickey fattened up a bit and pretty soon was topping over some of the big boys. Then came the great chance. Kearns matched Walker with Jack Sharkey. The affair took place in Brooklyn last Summer and after fifteen rounds the judges agreed that the gallant Walker held the Boston Gob even. It was a good fight and quite a feather in little Mickey's cap.

Then Kearns, in characteristic fashion, went after the match with Schmeling for the world's title. Max was willing and the thing was brought to the stage where the principals and the Madison Square Garden people were ready to sign on the dotted line. But the Garden was not too eager to go through with the match. The time was not ripe for an affair of this magnitude in Miami and as the estimated "draw" dwindled from approximately three-quarters of a million to figures as low as $200,000, enthusiasm cooled. And as a result little Mickey was left out in the cold.

Kearns has protested to the National Boxing Association in Chicago and has put in a claim in Walker's behalf, on the heavy-weight title on the grounds that Schmeling side-stepped his man. However, it seems that the Kearns squawk had much effect on the situation, for Schmeling has agreed to meet the one man who can assure him of grabbing off a purse commensurate with the Goshards of a champion—Jack Sharkey.

But then Mickey Walker and the Good Doctor are not the only ones affected by dwindling gate receipts. There are the ball players who received quite a shock when the new contracts for 1932 reached them. Cuts in salary were their portion. They hollered loud and often, threatened to hold-out, quit the game and what-have-you, but most of them have seen the light and have signed—maybe reluctantly, but they have signed. Which perhaps is the wisest course. Even Old Bill Tilden is feeling the pinch of falling receipts. His tennis tour is not tempting the cash customers in great numbers. A good deal of the waning interest in Bill's "pro" tennis tour can be laid to the cash with which Bill has been defeating his opponents. Paying clients, whether interested in boxing, baseball or tennis, must be assured of a contest before they will lay the dough on the line. And when that assurance is not there they prefer to stay by the fireside and wait for that event which promises the thrill they are ready to pay for.

And how they flock to those promising affairs! My, My!
